

Course Code : HUT 452

KQLR/RS – 24 / 1671

Seventh Semester B. Tech. (Electronics and Communication Engineering) Examination

ENGINEERING ECONOMICS

Time : 3 Hours]

[Max. Marks : 60

Instructions to Candidates :—

- (1) All questions carry marks as indicated against them.
- (2) Due credit will be given for neatness.
- (3) Assume suitable data wherever necessary.

1. A bakery sells a unique type of bread that has no close substitutes. If the bakery raises the price of this bread by 10%, what happens to the quantity demanded ? Analyze the elasticity of demand in this scenario. 10(CO1)
2. You are a project manager in a manufacturing company tasked with choosing between two different manufacturing processes for producing a new product. Process A has a higher initial cost but lower ongoing operational costs, while Process B has a lower initial cost but higher ongoing operational costs. Write the steps you would take in the decision-making process to evaluate and choose between Process A and Process B. 10(CO2)

OR

3. Evaluating business and engineering projects involves various methods to assess their feasibility, profitability and potential impact. Here you have to write atleast three methods of business / project evaluation. 10(CO2)
4. Why are operating revenues typically considering a more reliable indicator of a company's ongoing financial health than non-operating revenues ? 10(CO3)
5. How industries are differentiated based on their degree and nature of competition for goods and services in different Market Structure ? 10(CO4)

KQLR/RS-24 / 1671

Contd.

6. You are a financial consultant advising a start-up entrepreneur who is seeking funding to expand their business. The entrepreneur is preparing to meet with potential investors and lenders and is unsure about the role of the balance sheet in presenting their company's financial position. Explain the significance of the balance sheet in this context.

10(CO5)

OR

7. TechEquip Inc. is a technology manufacturing company that produces electronics gadgets, as the CFO of TechEquip Inc., explain the different methods of charging depreciation that can be applied to the company's assets.

10(CO5)

8. Imagine you are a financial advisor working with a client who is nearing retirement and is looking for stable investment options to generate income. The client is considering investing in bonds but is unsure about the various features to consider. Provide guidance to the client by explaining the types and key features of bonds that are important for investors.

10(CO6)

